Dear Jane and Dan,

The holiday season is indeed a wonderful time, renewing our appreciation of friendships so vital to the richness of our lives. Thus, I thank you for remembering me this season and want you to know that I savor your thoughtfulness.

The ending of the old year and the beginning of the new should be a time for rededication to ideals we most esteem: love and compassion, generosity and tolerance, wisdom and peace.

I know we share the highest hopes for 1988.

Best to you always,

Ever,

Alan Cranston
